AMENDMENTS TO THE BASE PROSPECTUS

I. SUMMARY

- (a) Element B.4b (Description of any known trends affecting the Issuer and the industries in which it operates) on page 8 is deleted in its entirety and replaced with the following:

“[If the Issuer is Societe Generale:

In 2017, the global economy will be marked by slow improvement in OECD economies and the continued transition of the Chinese economic model.

The Eurozone struggled to recover sustained economic growth in 2016, thus slowing the reduction of public deficits. The ECB should continue its accommodating monetary policy at least until the end of 2017, thereby maintaining market interest rates at low levels, in an environment where inflation should also remain low (although slightly above the rate observed in the region in 2016). In the United States, the Fed should continue its monetary tightening started in 2015, at a pace that will be dependent on the country’s growth momentum, which could be strengthened by the first effects of the expansionary economic policy of the new US administration. Despite these diverging monetary policies, we should observe a slight steepening of the yield curve in both Europe and the United States, with a gradual increase in long-term rates.

In emerging countries, growth in 2016 was moderate on the whole, and varied from region to region. This trend should continue in 2017, in particular with the continued shift in the Chinese growth model. However, commodity-producing countries should benefit from a moderate increase in commodity prices. In particular, oil prices should be supported by the production-limiting agreement signed within the OPEC at end-2016.

It is also likely that 2017 will be marked by a highly uncertain geopolitical environment, following on from a certain number of events in 2016. Major elections will be held in several key European Union countries (the Netherlands, France and Germany), and the year will also see the kick-off of Brexit negotiations. In addition, several hotbeds of instability or tension (in the Middle East or the China Sea) could adversely affect the global economy, as could a potential deterioration in relations between certain major world powers (United States, Russia and China).

2017 should also see the stabilisation of the regulatory framework (Basel reforms, IFRS, etc.) and, for most banks, mark the end of the cycle of equity increases that began with the financial crisis. In this context, the challenge facing banks will nonetheless remain the development of a sustainable long-term growth model and the preservation of their capacity to finance the economy. Indeed, the addition of recent regulatory constraints will weigh on the profitability of certain banking activities and thus influence the strategy and development model of certain operators in the sector.

In Europe, due to the various elections to be held this year within the Eurozone, it is likely that 2017 will see little progress towards the third pillar of the Banking Union, regarding the creation of a European deposit guarantee facility. Ultimately, this facility will contribute to the stability and strengthening of the European banking sector, but could entail significant costs for banking players.

Lastly, banks must continue to adapt to a certain number of fundamental shifts, particularly the acceleration of technological changes, requiring them to radically transform their operational and relationship models. Moreover, the Group is working on a medium-term strategic plan, which will be disseminated towards the end of 2017.]

[If the Issuer is SG Issuer: The Issuer expects to continue its activity in accordance with its corporate objects over the course of 2017.]”
